A New, Wonderful and Useful Invention, CALLED A Tidal Power, Has been discovered at the expense of many years study and experiment which will revolutionize the method of obtaining power for driving machinery of all kinds. Although this power is obtained from the rise and fall of the tides, machinery can be driven a long distance from the seat of power with this invention, by means of a wire rope which is now in common use for similar purposes. This Machinery is so simple and occupies so little room that it can be erected on any wharf and the expense of the Machinery very trifling compared to other power. It will run for years without any expense and without any person to tend it, the power being continuously obtained night and day if desired, a constant wave being sufficient to drive light machinery. This power can easily and effectually be applied to ring Fog Bells, saving the Government thousands of dollars yearly needing no attention after being once set in motion. The principle by which a continuous motion of the Main Shaft is insured in a given direction, can also be applied to Sewing Machines and prevent the possibility of the machine changing to the trouble of no backward motion which breaks the thread by using this process on Sewing Machines, both hands of the operator are entirely at liberty to hold the work. Children can run Sewing Machines. In manufacturing Sewing Machines for the future the Balance Wheels can be entirely dispensed with, consequently making a great saving in the main fixtures. This principle can be applied to every machine at a trifling cost. The application of this principle can also be made to foot Lathes. The motion of the foot treddle is nearly perceptible and more speed attained than with the crank. It also saves the motion of the body when propelling the machine, and favors the ankle. The "Close-Treadle" for Sewing Machines, constructed to embody the above named principle and capable of being applied to sewing machines of any size, kind, or make, are now being manufactured, and in a few days may be seen, at the clothing store of B. P. Howe, successor to the late A. B. Howe, the originator of the "Improved Howe Sewing Machine." A license to manufacture and sell ten thousand of the "Close Treadle" having been granted to A. E. Kimball, agent for the "Improved Howe Sewing Machine," he will immediately introduce them to this market through his agents, who will apply them to machines of any name, fashion or price so that every person owning a Sewing Machine will be able to have one. It is a useful and valuable invention, and is worthy of the investigation of all scientific men. Letters Patent were issued for this Invention, dated December 27th, 1870, obtained through the agency of Munn & Co., Scientific American Office, New York. Patent Office, March 27th, 1871.

SENATOR SUMNER'S REVENGE

Judging from the very imperfect telegraphic abstract of Senator Sumner's speech, its character will prove a source of disappointment and regret to those who expected the Senator to rise above all the influences of personal animosity and to treat the important questions of international law presented in a calm judicial statesmanlike manner, which would elevate the speaker's sentiments above the atmosphere of recrimination and convey the impression of a suspension of individual rancor. We were aware that such expectation argued an exceptional possession of self control and superiority to the ordinary impulses of passion and prejudice which few men are able to exercise but there were undoubtedly many of the warmest and ardent friends of the distinguished Massachusetts Senator, who expected from him an example of that lofty devotion to high moral principles, which should give no room for the cackling counties of the main through which we can but think that the speech delivered on Monday with all its power and force will prove a sore and lasting disappointment

Upon the question of Constitutional and international law so exhaustively discussed Mr Sumner has thought necessary to make other comment at this time than to say that his position is in accordance with a respect commensurate with his great experience and acknowledged acquirements a respect which is evidently the evidence given in his behalf by the statesmen which judgment has been influenced by other considerations than those of public policy. His argument on these points we prefer to refer to its entire completeness, that in justice and a clear understanding of it should any man that we should hear what he has to say on the other side. It is not that Mr Sumner sets forth particular views as to the acquisition of foreign territory or the methods that may properly be pursued for such a purpose which causes our regret at the attitude which he has assumed but that he has chosen to make the expression of those views the vehicle of a bitter if not utterly unjustifiable assault upon the character and conduct of the President imputing to him not merely the adoption of a mistaken policy but flagrant usurpations and a defiance of Constitutional restraint of which the people will not readily believe him guilty. Whether the action of the Government towards Dominica and Hayti has been in violation of public law, as Mr Sumner asserts or in strict conformity with established precedents, as is emphatically asserted on the other side, there are very few who will believe that the President has justified the charges of a wilful perversion of power and propriety a reckless contempt for Constitutional restrictions or the assumption of dictatorial prerogatives. In preferring the unexpected impeachment of an Executive whose administration has been signalized by an especial faithfulness in the enforcement of the laws Mr Sumner has undoubtedly committed a grave injustice to overlong discretion which has alienated the sympathies of many who have been quick to resent apparent injustice to himself

Mr Sumner cannot forget that in imputing unworthy motives to all who favor the acquisition of St Domingo he is obliged to square his course with his avowed sympathy as advocate of the Alaska purchase and their influence derived from the advantages of a temperate climate so highly extolled in his own published speech and the delights of Alaska have been in the obviously hurried and by the spirit of that Arctic Paradise The French have already manifested a willing spirit to the question of annexation at the next session of Congress which will have given him ample time to become acquainted of the wishes of the people and if they were found opposed to the project the whole matter would doubtless have been withdrawn from the political arena Mr Sumner by assailing the Administration with charges of high crimes and misdemeanors has forced the President into a position which renders the consummation of the enterprise difficult if not impossible from to whom compromise of principle or art perhaps scarcely less repugnant than to the Senator himself Our opinion is at this time that the people generally are interested with the desirability of the project of annexation, and while we have no doubt that the Commissioners report can present considerations sufficiently powerful to reverse the opinion of the propriety of giving them a respectful hearing, has been almost unanimously conceded and it would seem that Mr Sumner would have exhibited more courtesy had he deferred his argument until the report of an investigation ordered by the legislative body of which he is a member The arrival of the Commissioners within a few hours of the close of his speech, proves that but little delay was necessary, and by waiting until the latest official information was before the Senate he would have escaped the appearance of impulsive eagerness to attack and also the possible inference of a desire to anticipate the evidence

We regret that such a speech has been made and especially that Charles Sumner has been willing to make it. No man can be more fully aware of the necessity of unitedness at this time and few will be able to appreciate the philanthropy which has induced him so embarass the efforts to protect the lives of thousands of persecuted citizens of this country both white and colored, by provoking a wrangle over alleged indignities towards a neighboring government which has not yet complained of ill treatment.

The President undoubtedly made a political mistake in pressing the project of annexation though he was evidently impressed with its national importance the Senate made a blunder when Sumner was removed from his position as Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Sumner has crowned the chapter of errors by descending from the eminence to which inferred persecution had elevated him to open a bitter personal warfare upon the Executive By this indulgence he has destroyed the prestige of martyrdom, and it would seem impossible that reflection should fail to convince Mr Sumner that devotion to human rights and an unselfish regard for the duties of the hour, might have been exemplified in a manner more profitable in its results and better calculated to add lustre to his reputation

"THE GUELPH GIRL'S MARRIAGE." The Portland Press has kindly responded to our request that it explain its denunciation of the marriage of Princess Louise, and we copy the following statement from its article

"If it should be found that the cannibals of Central Africa, in a sudden paroxysm of sentimentality and moral activity, had decreed that hereafter all the anthropophagi should content themselves with eating prisoners of war, and that roast missionary should no longer be recognized as a legitimate article of diet, the whole world would applaud This circumstance would be regarded as evidence that there were some good influences at work among the man-eaters, but we do not suppose that it would be regarded as conclusive as to the rightfulness of devouring human flesh"

Of course! We are surprised that this view should have escaped us.

A series of engagements have taken place in the eastern department of Cuba, between the Spanish troops and the insurgents, in which the latter lost in killed, alone near y 100. The insurgent General Acosta, was killed near Bayamo.

THE PRESS ON SUMNER'S SPEECH

The Boston papers contain the full text of Senator Sumner's speech as furnished in advance sheets, filling ten and a half columns of the Journal, though the telegraphic reports indicate that, as is quite usual, the speaker enlarged somewhat upon his original notes, especially in his personal allusions to the President

The Advertiser in an article which treats the Senator's action cautiously, says

It is the argument of an advocate, moved by high considerations no doubt, but still an advocate making the most of his materials without regard to consequences The records of the Departments and other sources of information from which Mr Sumner draws so largely have been public property for some time Whatever else they may show as to the manner in which these negotiations have been prosecuted, they certainly acquit the administration of any intention to press annexation against the consent of the people of San Domingo, as fairly expressed as is possible in the nature of things. The acts in which Mr Sumner sees the "front of war" will be judged by most people according to the manifest motive which prompted them—namely, to secure to the existing government of Dominica the power of completing the negotiations without interference from its enemies

The Journal, which evidently writes from a perusal of the printed speech which does not contain the Ku Klux denunciation, and apparently regarding the charge of usurpation and despotism as a compliment expresses the following opinion

Those who anticipated that his speech was to be, or to embody, a personal assault on the President, will find themselves completely mistaken It is true he considered the course of the President illegal and wrong, but he does not step aside from the severe logic of his argument to make use of any epithets calculated to wound the feelings of any man, unless it be those of President Baez of Dominica In this general respect the speech will be very gratifying to the friends of the Senator, while it will strengthen its influence upon public opinion

The Post is of course jubilant over the assault upon the administration and endorses all the indictments preferred, but is not impressed with the oratorical brilliancy of the effort It says

It was a piece of singular good fortune to the Senator from Massachusetts that he was able to pronounce his speech on San Domingo just prior to the rendition of the report of the Commission * * * *

The speech itself will disappoint everybody It is but a bundle of citations a documentary hash, without quickening oratory on even vigor of phrase So dull a nature as Grant's needs a sharper and a heavier lash than this, so serious an accusation of a President demands language of a fitter determination A Webster, or a Webster, that arraigning the Executive before the Senate and the country, would have converted his words into thunders and the most insensible mind would have been aroused by their power as they pictured the recreancy of the highest office in the Government

Mr Greeley, in Tuesday morning's Tribune discussing Senator Sumner's speech, and the question of St Domingo annexation takes more decided ground than ever before held by that paper against the acquisition of the Island It says that Sumner has blundered if he thought to gain any advantage by forestalling the report of the commission, but that even if the majority of the commission be favor annexation, the grave questions of debt protection to loyal Internal regulations and other important matters arise and must be settled before annexation can be declared desirable

The Times says the facts adduced by Mr Sumner scarcely warrants the conclusions he draws and fails to establish the charges of usurpation against President Grant

The Herald says Sumner's speech will go far to seal the fate of Grant's administration and the radical party He makes out a case for impeachment of a much more serious nature than that worked up against President Johnson Gen Grant as President has failed in two's little else but blunders both in domestic and foreign affairs

The World says nothing could have been more opportune than the line selected by Sumner for the delivery of this crushing speech The San Domingo commission arrived when Sumner's scathing exposure is the reigning sensation, and their report will sink in the wake of the speech, which must break and nullify its influence Their report is composed of a description of surpassing beauty set in diamonds, which a Thug has undertaken to steal, perhaps desirable if obtained honorably, but without attraction if stolen

THE INCOME TAX Commissioner Pleasonton decides that tax payers who prefer may make sworn returns of their aggregate taxable incomes for 1870, instead of filling in detail the blanks lately issued The clause of the exemption oath, stating that the gross income for 1870 did not exceed $2000 is also omitted

UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE THE GALLOWS James Wilson, the murderer of Warden Willard of the Connecticut State Prison starved himself five days last week — On Saturday the Prison Physician injected beef tea into his stomach and repeated the operation on Sunday Wilson thinking this worse than hanging, on Sunday addressed a note to the Warden dated 'Camp Hungry,' announcing his capitulation and calling for milk porridge and three crackers He is now taking food regularly

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS

FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 28.

SENATE.

Mr. Fenton presented a memorial from several hundred soldiers and sailors mainly of New York asking that the bounty land bill of last session be amended so as to permit these lands to be held without requiring settlement thereon.

Mr Sumner presented a memorial asking for the adoption of such measures as will secure a Court of Nations where all questions may be decided without the arbitration of the sword, and urging that in the point at issue between the United States and Great Britain every effort be made to avoid war between the two countries.

Under the rule of the Senate prohibiting general business, the memorials instead of being referred to Committees were laid on the table

Mr Sumner offered the following:

Whereas, It is represented that Frederick Douglas and his son were excluded from the common privileges of travellers on the mail steamer between Aquia Creek and Washington on account of their color, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia are hereby instructed to inquire into the facts of their case and consider what remedy can be applied to prevent the repetition of such treatment on account of color

The resolution was excluded under the pending rule.

Mr Kellogg asked consent to introduce a resolution for inquiry as to the desirability of annexing Lower California and Sonora and Chihuahua, Mexico, with report at the next session Objected to

Mr Anthony called up his resolution amending the order of business under which the Senate is now acting so as to admit the consideration of any bill in reference to the South received from the House of Representatives

Mr Thurman offered and advocated an amendment to require its consideration by a committee before action could be taken upon it by the Senate He regarded the contemplated Ku Klux legislation as more important than any other ever before undertaken by Congress, as involving the very existence of the government He protested against any attempt at caucus dictation to put such a measure through the Senate

Mr Anthony said it had been customary for Republican Senators to consult as to a common course of action upon particular measures, but that in no instance had a Republican caucus of the Senate bound any member to vote for or against a measure in the Senate

Upon the expiration of the morning hour the Senate resumed the consideration of the unfinished business of yesterday, being the resolutions of Mr Sumner on Santo Domingo, and Mr Howe continued his reply to Mr Sumner's indictment of the President

In the general denial of Mr Sumner's accusations, Mr Howe contended that instead of attempting to sell his country Baez had furnished an example worthy of imitation in subordinating his personal aggrandizement as a ruler to bring peace to his country by annexation The proposed sale to the United States instead of being in violation of the Constitution of Dominica, was in direct accordance with it, but the transfer was to be made not at the arbitrary direction of that government but in defence of the popular will of that country The United States was bound under the laws of nations and by a clause of an original negotiation to insure the preservation of peace between Dominica and Hayti and the notification of that effect was no more unfriendly to Hayti than any other notion for it was addressed to the world at large In conclusion, Mr Howe contended that the mission of the Republican party was not ended and he would beseech him who would engage in its destruction to take his position with the common enemy and not Judas like stab in the back the party to which he professed to belong

Mr Frelinghuysen after an eulogium on the services of Gen Grant to the country in its darkest hour of peril said this was the man upon whom all the vituperative adjectives of the vocabulary were hurled He then inquired for what purpose the Senator from Massachusetts had precipitated this discussion in advance of the report of the Commission from which alone Congress could form a correct judgment

Mr Sumner said if the Senator desired it he would answer now The Senator from Wisconsin (Mr Howe) had complained because he had brought this matter forward, and Senator Frelinghuysen because he did not postpone it He (Sumner) would take counsel of neither Senator, but his own heart. Knowing there was a system of lawlessness on the coast of San Domingo under the direct order of the President of the United States, he felt it his duty to expose it There were some cases in which exposure was sufficient and he felt that this was one, and that the American people only needed to see the wrong to apply the remedy

Mr Frelinghuysen, as a sufficient answer to Mr Sumner's strictures upon the course of the Secretary of the Navy, had read from the desk the dispatch of that official to Admiral Lee

Mr Schurz then took the floor and continued at great length in defence of Mr Sumner's position, being repeatedly interrupted by several Senators upon Congressional questions and had frequently prompted by Mr Sumner whose seat is in his vicinity

Before Mr Schurz had concluded the Senate went into Executive session, and at 5 15 p m, adjourned

HOUSE.

Mr Shellabarger of O, from the Select Committee on the President's message reported a bill to enforce the provisions of the 14th amendment and for other purposes

The bill was read a first and second time, when the Speaker said the question now was on ordering it to be engrossed and read a third time

The bill consists of four sections, and contains in a condensed form the strong points of the various Ku Klux bills which have been offered both in the House and Senate the present session The first section provides for more fully enforcing the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution, and for giving civil as well as criminal remedies to parties who have grievances arising thereunder It also extends the operative power of the enforcement act of 1870, which has been found to be almost wholly useless by reason of its vagueness and generality The second section relates to combination and conspiracies to violate the laws and abridge the immunities and privileges of citizens, and enlarges the operation of existing United States statutes to such cases, making them apply as stringently in the Southern States as they now do to points where the government has exclusive jurisdiction The third section gives the President power to declare when insurrection shall exist in the contemplation of the act, and to so declare by proclamation, and then use the military at his discretion, and to suspend the right of habeas corpus and declare martial law as exigencies may require It further provides that the President need not await a requisition from the State for troops, but that he may be the judge as to whether the State authorities are powerless or neglectful in the premises

Mr. Shellbarger moved to recommit the bill to the Committee so that general debate shall proceed on the bill until the House shall come to an agreement to terminate it and the vote on the amendments which may be offered He suggested that the debate be continued till Friday

Mr Wood of N. Y, suggested to let the general debate run along a reasonable period, so as to give every gentleman on both sides an opportunity for a full and free discussion. In his judgement they would sooner reach a vote by not fixing a day for its termination.

Mr Shellabarger of Ohio, was willing that the general debate should go on so long as it was the pleasure of the House.

Mr Beck of Ky, moved to provide that no gentleman should have his time extended beyond one hour.

The Speaker said that the bill reported would run through the morning unless some higher question of privilege should arise, and would continue to be in order until finally disposed of.

Mr. Shellabarger said that he should not call the previous question prior to next Monday, unless the House by its order indicated that it should be sooner done. He then opened the debate explaining in detail the provisions of the bill. The subject touched the liberty and the rights of all the people, and doubtless the destiny of the union itself. He showed the relations of the bill to the Constitution, and the power to pass it, and the justice and wisdom of the measure, and said in the course of his remarks that it had been added to the Constitution, the express words "all persons born or naturalized in this country, are citizens of the United States as well as of the severa States. This was done for a purpose. It was also added that no State should make or enforce any law abridging the rights citizenship, and further that no State shall deprive citizens of an equal protection of law. The provisions did not end there, but with still more abundant caution, added that no State should enforce by legislation to enforce these provisions. All being an year of the war republican and the slave privileges and immunities, and these self-evident principles found not be sing over, as intended. Each

NARROW ESCAPE Yesterday morning, as Mr Curtis, employed in Morse & Co's lumber mills on the Kenduskeag, stepped upon the edger saw table to fix a belt, he slipped and fell close by the rapidly revolving saw, which tore the left leg of his pants completely off, cut a piece 6 inches in diameter out of the middle of his boot leg and sawed diagonally across the sole of his left boot, clear through two thick soles and a heavy tap Men looking on were almost paralyzed with horror, expecting that Mr Curtis leg and foot were terribly mangled, but wonder ful as it may seem, not a drop of blood was drawn by this hazardous adventure, and the only mark he has to show for it is a slight scratch in the thick skin on the sole of his foot. Not once in ten thousand times, say experienced mill men, could a man escape injury under like circumstances

THE ADELPHIANS. This company played to a fair house last night, in a style that merited a larger audience We are pleased, however, to see that the audiences steadily increase, which is a good point in favor of the company. The Comedy, "Faces in the Fire," is an admirable exemplification of the power of jealousy, and the manner in which it was performed, far exceeded the expectations of those unacquainted with the talent of the actors. Mr. Hall as Cecil Vane, was exceedingly good, and made, the most of his part Miss Wiseman as Mrs Glanville, displayed qualities much above those of a mere burlesque actress, and was enthusiastically applauded. Mr. Griffin is a careful, painstaking actor, and appeared to much advantage as Hargreaves. The other parts were also well sustained. The after piece "The Windmill," was very amusing. To-night the "tastes of the period" will be catered to by the performance of the great sensational drama, "The Will and the Way," in which the whole company will appear. They cannot fail to have a full house.

BLOODY AFFRAY. On Thursday last, a man named Roswell F. Miller and his son Charles E., living at what is known as "Bull Run," in the edge of the town of Holden, went across the road to the house of John A. Miller, (son of Roswell, and brother of Charles), and calling him out brutally assaulted him, as they said, "to pay off an old grudge." Charles had a butcher knife sharpened to a point, and endeavored to stab John, but the latter jumped back and the blow intended for his heart, only tore his vest. Charles then sprang forward, and struck twice at John's head with the knife, each time cutting through a thick felt hat he wore and making a ghastly gash in his scalp from which the blood flowed profusely. Blinded by blood and dizzy from the blows, John started to run, when his father fired a revolver at him—the bullet taking effect in his groin, and making a severe and painful wound. The two sons then left their bleeding victim to take care of himself as best he could, threatening to return and give him some more when he attempted to do so. The matter was brought before Justice Hodgdon, of Orono, and the parties held to bail in the sum of $1000 each to answer to the action of the Grand Jury. Charles is thought to be the more guilty of the two, and if the story of John is true, he should be dealt with by the law with the utmost severity.

DR SCHENCK ADVISES CONSUMPTIVE TO GO TO FLORIDA IN WINTER

Having for the last thirty five years devoted my whole time and attention to the study of lung diseases and their simple cure I find that I understand both the cause that ought to be pursued to restore a tolerably bad case of these things to healthy soundness The first and most important step is if the patient has not already taken cold and is free of all places on this continent for this purpose in winter is Florida well down in the state where the temperature is regular and not subject to such extreme changes as in more northern latitudes I advise a point far in the south A good hotel is kept there by Coleman Lord who will save several persons (he knows whose lungs I and I have released) just who under the healing influence of the climate and my medicines were gone, which

On his first visit to Florida with the patient is to which I would prefer to Florida with the patient is to have even and the air is not biting While the latter place is located in a hollow surrounded by high land the former is on a high ridge about two miles from river lake and is nearly almost in a sandy soil and consequently dries up in a short time after a rain and permits a comfortable walk or drive in a few hours after the heaviest rain. It is the opinion of Florida that when the patient has arrived at the place of destination he should have a room with a fire in it and should not go out of it for a few days until he has recovered from the effects of the journey. The patient should then be able to take a short walk in the sunshine. If the weather is favorable he should be able to take a drive in a few days. If he can do this he may consider himself on the road to recovery. He should then

NORA IN THE NURSERY

BY [illegible] WATSON

[illegible]

"Because I knew you would have little in common, and thought it would be awkward for us all. It does not matter." Nothing did or ever would any more. A gray wall seemed to shut out all beyond this night.

"But I am not to be defrauded of my rights. I am to take you out to dinner, am I not, Vessey?" He bent his head close to her face.

"I don't know, you can sit upon one side and Miss Hayes upon the other, if he will," she moved away towards the other, leaning over his mother's charms pretended to listen. [illegible] smiling assent, to what, she never knew—she was thinking how pleasant the ball had hoped it would be with only Darrel and his mother here—they four around the fire in the twilight. Darrel by her—of the words she had thought he would speak. There was a time, long ago, upon his watch chain. It fitted her finger. He had tried it once in jest.

"Vessy," said her father. "And then she threw the others were rising—that dinner was announced.

"I hope you and Mrs. Winslow have been in raptures," she said to Paul, as they were going out.

"One hour's gaiety so far as that in a ball room is that, he answered pleasantly.

"And just before dinner," added Darrel, from the other side "That's the time to make the most of it, Miss Vessy."

"I'm happy to be served, gentlemen, let you quarrel."

"At the cause" quoted Darrel in her ear.

She turned away from him to Paul. And yet what should she say. What to people so numerous—all have been here before. And to young ministers who are all "on the hot not come." If he would only sell it he would tell us, and have her home with the disappointing and shamed.

How she passed the long dinner hour is more than she talked of travel stories as it [illegible] the dishes, the fruit and [illegible] and very soon in nothing. She danced not spoke of others, for she, for the first time Paul singed her. She has found her level depth, he said, when he changed to a lower ribbon. Her spirits rose, buoyed by her light words and laugh perhaps. When they parted back in the drawing room, and the officers left into the quiet dormitory that they follows a dinner, she alone could not be still. Her dull friends refused to my quietly in her to be simply white, truth should. He felt as an impatient waltz under her own. She glanced at Darrel. He had thrown himself back in an easy chair his hands under his head. Laughing with the fresh glitter in his eyes. He looked simply bored. He yawned carelessly. She pushed her chair back "How stupid we are! Is anybody tired? I think I always shall, everybody but itself. Will not some one sing or play?" And she sat down herself before the piano.

She struck a quick sharp chord "I could dance to night." She had forgotten the young musicians and his probable partners. He caught a glimpse, just then, of the flush and intense face. But in an instant, with the manner chord that followed, it changed—"Or we should into her eyes "I'll indeed for my slippers," she breathed to herself. Her back was to the others. Only Paul saw the sudden sickening of the face, the fall of the eyelids.

"Such wonderful spirits" exclaimed Mrs. Winslow "So light hearted Vessy dear as ever."

Darrel leaned over her "What has come to you?"

"How! Why" She did not pause to her playing.

"You're simply glorious now You hardly need a crown."

Her hands went wrong A quick clash—a hiss—then she was on. She was gone. Her mother was sitting by the fire in the parlor, so deliberately as a woman's spoke. He had risen at her. Her hands flashed over the keys, the song of sparkle of the violins ceased at once.

"Not that" Darrel whispered. "Play some thing sad and low. Do you forget it is our last evening." Vessy turned a little at them but for her never looked. She laughed—low quiet, ripple in her throat.

"Sorry" the keys lingered over the last chord. "Why I forgot I was to play. Let me carry it back, mamma." Darrel was [illegible] Paul was [illegible] Vessy [illegible] Paul [illegible] Vessy [illegible] Paul [illegible] Vessy [illegible] Paul
